Vlad will conduct a 3 day workshop in the studio. It will be held at the historic Slater Memorial Park in Pawtucket, RI.

Vlad will demonstrate his approach to creating impressionistic watercolors and bringing out the light, that is so crucial to every watercolor. He will show how to prepare a watercolor painting using small tonal sketches.

Each day will start with the detailed demonstration and lesson. Special attention will be given to the choice of colors and impressionistic style watercolor techniques.

- Discover simple steps to fresh and loose watercolor painting.
- Advance your skills in adding imaginary details to your painting and make it more vibrant.
- Receive individual instructions at the easel while creating your own painting.

"In my paintings I would like to express the beauty of landscapes through different light conditions and different approaches to interpretation of color in real life. I would like not to merely pick up the colors from the natural environment but to reinvent them right on my canvas. By using this approach I'm trying to achieve liquid quality of natural light in a landscape or natural setting. In particular, I'm interested in architectural elements and their integration through light conditions."

A detailed supplies list will be available. For more information about Vlad, his work, and his workshops, please go to his website: <https://www.yeliseyevfineart.com/>
